What's New In Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.3)?

An historic Albany apartment building that is being turned into commercial space is being sold by the city for $6.1 million, a sale spurred by a recent influx of activity for the area. The seven-story building, known as the Borroughs Building and located at 15 Washington Ave., is the last of the historic apartments to be redeveloped in downtown Albany. It was built in 1926 and retains its original terra cotta ornamentation, including terra cotta dragons above the windows. "It's the last of its kind that's going to be redeveloped, and it's a really big, big thing," said Jason Hill, director of purchasing with the Albany Central School District. "It's the main public school and its a jewel to the community." The building was used by the Jehovah's Witnesses as a meeting house until the 1980s when the sect had to move because of the proximity of more popular public schools in the area. In the early 1990s, it was converted into apartments. The Borroughs building at 15 Washington Ave. (Realtor.com) After nearly 20 years in the apartments, it was purchased by The Warner Group, which is going to convert the building into 100 student housing. "One of the biggest issues was we had to update the utilities in order to be an AEP [Albany Edison Power] customer and a D.C. customers. This is the first apartment building in the city of Albany to be a D.C. customer," Hill said. "After we could meet that standard, we then took a look at what we could develop and what we could put on the market. We couldn't do what we wanted to do for the market. And, we wanted to do something nice that fit the community." The apartments are about a half mile from the campus of the Albany Central School District, which serves about 3,800 children. "We have a major influx of students from upstate New York, and we're trying to find ways to attract them into the public school system," said Hill. "That's why the district chose to purchase the building. They are wanting to develop more space." The 10,000 square feet at the top level of the building will be leased to the school district, and a tenant in the ground level will handle the grocery needs of the students. "It's not that
